When she wasn't in the pasture or inside of the livestock arena, Vera worked hard at Benchcraft and the Ripley Shoe Factory. She married her husband, Victor Roberts, Sr. at the age of 18, and enjoyed 46 years of marriage until his death in 1999. Together, she and Victor had only one child, Victor Jr. in 1954. She loved going to Disney World every chance she could, and she especially enjoyed sharing those trips with her grandchildren. Vera also enjoyed going on trips into the Smokies for peace and quiet. Once she made a statement about wanting to move to Hawaii after she returned from a vacation to the island state.

“ I loved these two so much. Some of the best memories of my life include them. They carried me and a load of cows all over the state to every fair and livestock show we could find. Spent so much of my childhood with them. I will forever cherish those memories and the love they had for me! Heaven sure is lucky.
