“ God's Dilemma (The Carpenter)

*God found himself in a dilemma
That he couldn't seem to solve
He wished to build a place for us
But couldn't be involved
He had to use his time to care
For the sparrows and the babes
And had to find the perfect man
To build his perfect place*

*He searched the heavens far and wide
But couldn't find his hire
And slumped himself into his throne
Both discontent and tired
He placed his head into his hands
And whispered quietly
There must be someone somewhere
Who could build this place for me*

*Who could build the homes in heaven?
Who could be so skilled?
To make sure that the gates are hung
And the temple door is milled
Who could cut every angle
No matter how absurd?
Who will always be on time
And always keep his word?
Who will have integrity
No matter what the cost?
Who will know just what to do
When everything seems lost?
Who will keep on learning
And never be content
With second-handed wisdom?
He asked in his lament*

*Just when everything seemed lost
A rumbling caught his ear
And through his mighty pearly gates
A carpenter appeared
He said his name was Victor
But asked to be called Vick
He walked with the Creator
And he told him what he'd fix
God knew that he had found the soul
That's perfect for the job
And heaven gained a carpenter
With God's dilemma solved*

*Heaven gained a carpenter
But me, I lost a friend
I know one day we'll meet again
When time comes to an end
Across a sea of starlight
In dimensions far away
I'll meet him on the shore bank
And we'll laugh for all the day
We'll talk about the good times
We'll walk the golden way
We'll see beyond the veil
And understand why it's this way*

*Until I take my final breath
And climb that sacred tree
I'll live my days out knowing
That the carpenter's with me*
